The Experts One Sheet- Ollie Burrow

“The Experts” is a scripted character based comedy made to appear as a competition reality show. Think Waiting for Guffman meets The Great British Bake Off. Six experts (ranging in expertise) compete in a competition reality show in order to win one million dollars and the title of “Expert of Experts”. They compete in weekly challenges that are based on real life/current popular competition shows. One week's challenge will be a Bake Off inspired episode, the next episode will be inspired by Rupaul's Drag Race, The Voice, America's Next Top Model, Alone, Wipeout etc etc. The experts are all vastly different from one another and have differing niches in which they are experts in. The catch is, I will be playing every character.

There are six unique and incredibly different experts battling it out each week. There is an expert in feng shui, the dewey decimal system, decorative faberge eggs, welding, musical instruments, and an expert in the sense of smell. The host is a classic British narrator. Imagine David Attenborough and Stephen Fry had a beautifully well spoken daughter.

The style is similar to a mockumentary- it's all fake, it's all a sham, yet meant to look like an actual competition show. Both the fictional show and the real show will be called “The Experts”. This is a show about a show. “The Experts” is a comedic miniseries about the cast of characters on a competition show and the cliches/tropes that exist. The characters are comically broad, but put into a very structured and established environment. The world of competition reality shows sare already defined.
